

VACCINATION POLICY

In a health career program, students have an increased risk of exposure to various health risks and illnesses, including Hepatitis B. In regard to Hepatitis B, the college informs students that this is a very serious illness but it can be prevented by a Hepatitis B vaccination. After explaining the health risks of Hepatitis B, the college gives students a choice of action:

1. To disclose to the college that he/she has already been immunized.
2. To seek immunization
3. To not pursue immunization for Hepatitis B, even though the student has been informed by the college and understands he/she is at some risk of contracting the disease.
